HOW WE DO IT

DON'T JUST TALK ABOUT IT, BUILD IT!

We believe that the best way to prove something is by going ahead and actually building something. We use proof of concept and prototype developments to show our customers what's possible. This allows us to get rapid user feedback, quickly identify approaches and architectures that will work, and it keeps our high-energy team excited and challenged.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR FOUNDER

I launched 540.co with the belief that incredible opportunities for innovation in government exist at the intersection of big data, modern technologies, and agile development processes. Since then, we have sought clients (and clients have sought us) who are interested in building partnerships with us to exploit these opportunities into powerful yet lightweight capabilities that we can rapidly put into users' hands.

Through the use of short proof of concept prototypes that apply the latest open source tools and frameworks, we can immediately introduce new ways of using technology to meet our clients' emerging needs. From prototype to full operating capability, we work with our clients the way commercial startups do – rapid, successive, iterations that evolve as our stakeholders and their processes evolve, because they are part of our development process during each step of those iterations.

At the core of our expertise is our people. Passionate data nerds who understand tech, but also have extensive experience in Government information technology management. This means we understand the nuances of working in secure, regulated environments. We stand ready to help your agency unlock the potential of its data to gain valuable insights, make more informed decisions, and not just meet your mission objectives, but accelerate them.
